“Well, can you do it?” Knight Commander J. Michael Duncan asked Jesse Lyons, Director of Communications, and E. Kent McMichael, Archivist. The trio and other staff were enjoying a beautiful Charleston evening after having just completed the inaugural initiation for the graduation class of the Theta Commission in 2010. Duncan was asking if a commission could be established for graduates from the United States Military Academy by the following May.

When the 73rd Convention (2009) moved to amend the Kappa Alpha Laws allowing the creation of commissions for the nation’s service academies, few thought the first would be established and initiating new members within the first two years.

But in May of 2011, six gentlemen became the founders of the Sigma Alpha Commission for graduates of the United States Military Academy in West Point, New York. Duncan authorized the creation of the commission after a petition was received from five alumni and the Advisory Council approved the pending action.

Fraternities are not allowed to operate at the service academies, but the new legislation allowed for commissions to honor graduates with membership, thus giving them a lifetime KA experience.

All previous commissions were established for formerly Active Chapters, thus giving them an immediate name. For instance, since Beta Chapter was dissolved due to the abolition of fraternities at the Virginia Military Institute, the Beta Commission was the immediate name. The designation had to be considered for posterity and future growth. The Naval, Air Force, and other service academies are locations for continuation of the commission initiative.

The commission’s chairman-designate, retired four-star General Jack N. Merritt, was the driving force behind the initiative. General Merritt was the first Army officer to receive the Medal of Honor since World War II and was a member of Beta Eta, Oklahoma ‘49.

Fraternities are not allowed to operate at the service academies, but the new legislation allowed for Commissions to honor graduates with membership, thus giving them a lifetime KA experience.

(Beta Eta – Oklahoma ‘49), did not think they evoked the excitement needed to compliment the new unit of the Order. During an early spring 2011 meeting of Duncan and Merritt in Washington, DC before the North American Interfraternity Conference’s annual business session, the men agreed upon the designation Sigma Alpha. “Sigma” designates the commission for graduates of a service academy and “Alpha” assigns it as the first of its kind. Consequently, “Sigma Beta” may be assigned next, and so forth.

Four stellar graduates and two alumni were elected. Drawing from traditions established by both the Beta and Theta Commission plans took shape. On May 16, in West Point Lodge #877, national administrative staff held first a public induction for family of new members to attend and learn more about the Order. Guests and family departed. The first initiation in Sigma Alpha’s history was then conducted in the shadow of West Point.

That evening, a celebration was held at the grand Thayer Hotel. With great fellowship, all new initiates, their families, staff, and the Knight Commander gathered first in the Patton Tavern for a reception, then in the Hap Arnold Room for the banquet. Staff Archivist, SGM E. Kent McMichael (Beta Comm.-VMI ’95) presented each new brother with a Military Division recognition pin. MAJ Lowrance of the Commission welcomed all attending on behalf of General Merritt. Lyons then introduced then Knight Commander Duncan. He told of the Order’s legacy with graduates of VMI and The Citadel; of our ties with military luminaries such as Marshall, Patton, and Byrd. He remarked that Robert E. Lee served as Superintendent of the Academy and lived in the house designated as such at West Point. Years later another Superintendent, this time a KA initiate, would reside in the same home. LTG Sidney B. Berry (Alpha Upsilon – Mississippi ’43) would join KA at Ole Miss then and transfer to begin his Army career. From former Commandant GEN Sam Walker (Beta Comm.-VMI ’82) to many others, KAs have informally walked the grounds of the Academy before.

Duncan summed it up when he said, “the honor is all of ours to now have the humble opportunity to initiate graduates from this Academy. We seek not to add anything to the history of West Point. We openly seek only to add some of these great men to our roll of honor and give us an opportunity to call them brothers.”

The Sigma Alpha Commission continues to look for nominees of gentlemen to elect to membership. If you know current year graduates or those who have previously graduated from the United States Military Academy, please send them to Jesse S. Lyons at jlyons@ka-order.org for consideration by the Commission.
